History

Some of us still remember that day we walked into the first grade and into the hustle and bustle of school life.

Those first few years hold for us many pleasant memories; learning how to read, write and spell, and—oh, those multiplication tables! We recall, too, how much fun we had trying to dodge Miss Bettie Harker’s little paddle.

The next two years passed quickly, and soon we found ourselves in the eighth grade. That year we had picnics, hayrides, and even our own basketball team. The most important event of the year, however, was a trip the grade took to Raleigh for a tour of the capitol city. Then finally that long awaited day arrived when we would graduate into high school.

At first we were quite confused, but we weren’t long getting into the “swing” of things although we really took some ragging as poor “green freshmen.”

Some of us almost ran Mr. Talbert crazy that year, but he survived only to have us again as sophomores. At one time or another he threatened to throw us all out the window, but he just never got around to it. We took it easy in our sophomore year; not so much to worry about, not so much to do; but that didn’t last long after we became juniors. Our most important social activities for the junior year were highlighted by the Junior-Senior banquet and picnic. They were really swell.

This year we finally became “dignified seniors.” So much has happened in our senior year, it is hard to say which event we have enjoyed most. Among them have been the senior day at E. C. T. C., the senior play, our trip to Washington, D. C., the Junior-Senior banquet, the Junior-Senior picnic, and climaxing everything, our graduation. Words cannot express how much we have enjoyed and appreciated each and every one.

We sincerely hope that you will find some pleasure in reading a few of our past experiences. Furthermore, we wish to thank each and every member of the faculty and all others concerned for the patience and understanding in helping us to further our education.

Signed—Betsy Thornton
TROPHY

As I strolled along the oceanside and watched the waves rolling against the shore, I became so sleepy I stopped, sat down on the sand, and listened to the waves roar. It seemed that all of a sudden I looked and saw someone sailing in, with the white capped waves from the wide blue ocean, a large shimmering white ship.

The ship came closer and closer until I could see figures moving about on the deck. It was a beautiful ship, very large and interesting. I swam out to the steamer and was helped aboard by the mates, Bobby Bowers and Tom Eaton. I was rushed into a shower and as I emerged, I was presented with clothes sent me by Sherry Willis and Ida Mae Broadhurst, co-owners of the dress center. I dressed hurriedly and wandered around to find a beauty shop. This steamer had everything imaginable. It was a city in itself. I soon found a beauty parlor and Charline Salter, the hairdresser, fixed my hair.

I was hungry by this time, so I went into what appeared to be the gathering place. There I found that Elvin Franks was manager, and saw Eugene Steed and Jimmy Johnson waiting on tables. To my surprise, I ran into Frieda Robinson, Bertie Warren, Ethel Smith, and Evelyn Jenkins, now on a world tour. After talking to these old friends, I roamed about the ship some more.

I went below and suddenly realized that I was standing directly in front of a lawyer's office. As I peeped into adjoining rooms down the hall, I saw Jane Ballou, Jane Howerton, Colleen Swinson, Odessa Salter, and Ona Willis, now special secretaries of the prominent lawyer L. E. Wade.

I walked back on deck to get some fresh salt air and as I approached the stern I heard noisy baby squabbles. There to my amazement sat the former Mary Lee Arthur, June Bloodgood, Lois Simpson, Betty Thornton, Barbara Wrath, and Ida Willis watching their offspring. What adorable children! I didn't take the time to find out the married names of all these friends. However, they informed me that Etta Ruth Jones was the ship's school teacher and Claudette James the art director. About that time my old pal, Peggy Leary, now society writer for the steamer, came over to get news from us. We talked for awhile, then she accompanied me around the ship, and directed me to the Green Laundry, managed by Patsy Green.

Since it was getting late, I decided to go to the ship's night club. As I entered, Mary Ruth McKnight, hostess of the club, welcomed me and told me that Leslie Feagle was manager of the club. Near the door I saw a poster which read, "Bobby Hessie, world famous pianist, tonight!" and I realized that here was an old friend who had finally won a well deserved title. All the ship's prominent people seemed to be at the club, and soon I recognized Doctor Charles Macy and his nurse Ann Oglesby. Featured on the floor show was a very excellent quartet, Bobby Oglesby, Ed Oglesby, Gibson Smith and Ray Smith. I wasn't too much surprised when over at the side I recognized photographer Guy Paul Dixon getting a shot of the quartet.

By this time it was getting quite late, so I decided I would go back out on deck, get some fresh air, then go to bed. I walked out on deck and saw the water shimmering beautifully in the moonlight. All of a sudden a wave came splashing over the deck and I found myself sprayed with cold water. My eyes opened and I found that instead of being on the deck of that beautiful steamer I was here by the seaside. I got slowly to my feet and began to retrace my steps down the beach, looking inwardly at all the things I had seen in my dream. Who knows but that the dream was prophetic!

The Student Council, under the leadership of Charles Macy, has done a remarkable job this year for the Morehead City High School. Under the guidance of Mrs. Waldron Baily, our advisor, we have succeeded in attaining the goals we had set.

Our projects have been helpful to the school in many ways. Our most important ones were redecorating the council room and putting towel dispensers in the rest rooms.

For entertainment we had a Christmas dance which was enjoyed by all who attended. Everything considered, we have had a good year.

We thought the day would never come,
The 26th of May;
But it dawned bright and beautiful,
Taking our breath away.
It finally came, that night of nights,
With expectations our hearts beat high,
But putting on our solemn white,
We felt that we could cry.
Our thoughts turned to the years ahead,
Then flashed again to our past,
We thought of the fun, the tears, and fears,
The things we’d done for twelve long years;
We’d yearned to be free from work and school;
We’d had temptation to break the rules,
To fuss at our teachers,
To burst forth in song,
To do as we pleased all day long.
Those we’ll remember for long, you may bet,
But high school friends we’ll never forget.
