Morehead City . . . Ap

This scene of Morehead City was drawn for Frank Leslie Macon from the upper porch of the Macon House at 9th and A known as the Silas Webb house, the first brick house to be buil Wade, later to become the home of Alex Webb. To the back E.H. Gorham, it was remodeled to its present condition, not the railroad tracks running down the center is at the left. The making salt at the plant at the point. This shows one of the town was founded.

Approximately 100 years ago

Leslie's magazine in April 1862. It was made during the battle of Fort and Arendell Streets. The small one-story house in the foreground was e built in the town. The house to the extreme right was built by Anthony back of the Wade house is the Styron house. After being purchased by n, now the home of I.E. Pittman on Evans Street. Arendell Street with of the windmill in the distance was used to pump salt water for use in of the earliest scenes of Morehead City, taken just five years after the

Bedication

MRS. LUCILE ARTHUR SMITH

Early Christian writers augmented the four Platonic cardinal virtues with the moral virtues of patience and humility, so there must have always been some people like "Miss Lucile."

We didn't know just what it was at the time, but like other first graders for two generations, we have found that she possessed, to a remarkable degree, the ability to impart the confidence necessary for that first step from home to the outside world.

We can't remember just what "Miss Lucile" taught us, for that which we learned was not imparted so much by spoken words as by an impression that inspired self-reliance in the lives of scores of children from this community.

Of course, there are others to follow her just as there were others before her, but our school and town have been greatly enriched by the presence of our "Miss Lucile!"

Dedication

MR. DELFIDO CORDOVA

William Shakespeare said, "Mine honor is my life; both grow in one; take honor from me and my life is done."

In 1935 Delfido Cordova joined the Morehead City High School faculty to establish a new department in Industrial Arts.

Mr. Cordova, a man of honor, has never compromised in his own life but has held true in living the life of a Christian gentleman, while holding high the standards of character and good work for his students. He demanded that the boys under him give their best to their work, and many lads, in later years, have thanked him for holding them to his standard of excellence.

Not only the school, but his church and his community as well have profited by the influence of this good man in our midst.

We regret that his years of retirement are at hand and wish for him continued years of service in our community and a well deserved rest from the rigors of the classroom.

Administration

OUR PRINCIPAL

horoughly convinced that next in importance to the business of saving souls is the business of education;

ends a sympathetic ear to the woes of wayward seniors and the trials of tiny tots with equal consideration;

Indeavors to inject his high sense of moral and intellectual integrity and absolute honesty into the student body, faculty, PTA, et al;

oticeably heavy on the "No's";

Vonderfully refreshing and convincing with his interpretive reading of scripture, infectious sense of humor, and unstudied, winning ways;

fficially competent: with executive ability, wizardry in arranging schedules, and prayerful, studied judgements;

id in wisdom, but youthful, "sure handsome" (in the words of Johnny, a first grader), overseeing all that goes on throughout the school;

Doggedly holding to principle and sincere in his convictions;

eader in championing justice, leans heavily on the Lord and seems rewarded with a fine wife and family;

unvisions greater things to come while energetically working for order, scholarship, and intellectual and athletic achievement;

gard and heartfelt thanks of students and the high regard and heartfelt thanks of students, faculty, and townspeople---not without the kind of opposition to be expected.

The class of 1957 was saddened by the sudden death of one of our members just one year before graduation.

A faithful friend and a willing worker, always loyal to his duties, William will be long remembered by classmates and teachers alike.

From the darkness come the faint strains of "It's Three O'Clock in the Morning." But we haven't danced the whole night through. Au contraire, we've spent the time trying to meet the deadline for the EAGLE. Tomorrow our backs will be aching and our eyes swollen shut, but the paper must be printed. Why, oh, why can't we get anything done before the last minute? It seems that no matter how hard we work in the weeks before publication, there are always a thousand and one things to do in the space of one evening. Some of the poor zombis walking around in their sleep aren't even in Journalism class. They're our faithful typists, and without them we'd be lost. Man, I could stretch a mile. Are there any restaurants still open? Stupid question though; everything closed hours ago. What ! This is the last page? Can't believe it! Dawn is just now breaking. Hope you don't mind, Mrs. Dowdy, but I'm sleeping in English class tomorrow.
