THIS IS FORT MACON. Bounded by the Atlantic Ocean on the south and Bogue Sound on the north, it stands on the Outer Banks overlooking the Beaufort Inlet. Intermittently for over a hundred years it has served to bar the entrance to the coastal area and protect Carteret County. In its role of coastal defense, Fort Macon has been serviceable and beneficial.

A classical, irregular pentagon in shape, the Fort is said to contain 15 million locally made brick. The durability and design of its masonry evoke praise. Form, proportion, and antiquity combine to please the visitor who walks through its quiet, clean rooms or stands in the court which they surround. There he can observe what only the winds from the ocean can do to a cedar. Stillness and beauty are piercing among cannon implacements and relics of war. In its role as State Park, Fort Macon offers architectural beauty and lingering memories.

How like the Fort is the dual province of education, serving to provide the practical and the aesthetic, with the varying talents and tastes of those whose needs are served requiring diverse nuances between the extreme pragmatic and the insubstantial pageantry of beauty!

May our curriculum encompass our different needs—for some a functioning machine, for others the creation or enjoyment of a lyric moment.
Dedication

In 1934 MRS. FLORENCE CORDOVA came to Morehead City to teach for one year while her husband was in school at the University of North Carolina. She stayed, however, and MCHS has benefited by twenty-five years of service from her.

Vitality is Mrs. Cordova's prominent characteristic. So vigorous and swift is she that even Browning's forceful line must be accelerated to describe her—"One who never turned his back but 'ran' breast forward ..." She has endeavored to bring to her pupils all the advancements of science and the knowledge of art to make nutrition more healthful, dress more appealing, home decoration more tasteful, and good manners the heritage of all. She has known her students in the home as well as in the school. Because she is a woman of generous scope as well as of prodigious energy, she has been well fitted to teach in the broad field of home economics.

Her unmistakable footfall in the halls will be missed by people who work late after school.

Mrs. Delfido Cordova
MISS ANNIE MAY GIBBS came to Morehead City to teach third grade ten years ago. Twenty-eight members of that first class of hers are Seniors and are "retiring" with her from the Morehead City School.

Miss Gibbs has kept her roll books, and a glance at these keeps fresh in her mind the four hundred odd students she has taught in Morehead City. She, in turn, remains secure in the minds and hearts of her students because of her faithfulness in her work, her unfailing good counsel, her interest in people, and her gentle influence. A real understanding of her students, their abilities and failings, has contributed to happy association and progress in the classroom. Her dignity, thoughtfulness, and wisdom have made her welcome company among her fellow workers.

After forty-nine years of service, Miss Gibbs is retiring from active duty as a teacher. May the coming years be kind to her and may she be happy in the knowledge that she has endeared herself to many people.

Miss Annie May Gibbs
Mr. J. Lenwood Lee
Principal

Coming to Morehead City High in 1955, Mr. T. Lenwood Lee has led the school during a period of growth. Under his leadership our quality of instruction has improved, our curriculum broadened, our physical assets expanded. He has ideally assumed the triple-role of leader, counselor, and disciplinarian.

We, the students of Morehead City High School, are sincerely grateful and hope that he will remain the governing head of our school for years to come.

Administration

The Principal's "indispensables" are these office assistants. Seldom a day passes that we are not served by Jennie Lou's dependable bell ringing, Mike's know-how in the use of the projector and other machines, and David's inimitable voice on the inter-com. Barbara Harrell, Jean Byrd, and Jo Ann Parson are others who help with the many tasks to be done in the school's nerve center.
Faculty

They say the postman is one of the few who must perform his duty through rain, snow, and sleet, but we know of several other very important people who most certainly fit into this category—our faculty.

As soon as the semester begins, they’re down to the grind, trying to fill our heads with a little of that knowledge that we so desperately need. In the classrooms or at the activities they sponsor, they manage after awhile to lure our preoccupied minds away from trivial things which stand in the way of our learning. Too often we fail to realize the importance of their guidance and encouragement. How they manage to keep up that old fighting spirit through all of this confusion is more than we can understand.

Throughout the year something other than the courses we study is learned. It is not something you gain from textbooks or something you experiment with in a lab; instead it is an intangible something that is gained only through contact with people. Along the path that we follow through high school little things are picked up here and there, and when they are combined they turn out to be memories—memories of Mrs. Baily and her "dear sweet children," of Mr. Mendenhall and his special appeal to students as their favorite, of Mrs. Dowdy's willingness to accept late homework which more than once has saved a student's life, of Mrs. Phillips' reminder that Seniors must have decorum, of Mr. Clark and his champion qualities as a football coach, and, of course, memories of Mr. Taylor's magnetic charm.

There are others whom space will not permit us to acknowledge; nevertheless, we hope they will not feel neglected, for we will remember them all.

Rapport is apparent among parents and teachers. These members of the Parent-Teacher Association could be making plans for the Halloween Carnival, talking over the good work of high school students—not likely discussing the outcome of the bond issue.

Obviously the time is not 8:10 A.M., when forty-odd faculty members crowd the outer office to check mailboxes and read the informative bulletin board.

These eight women members of the faculty prepare for the Christmas tea, which has become traditional. Mrs. Lenwood Lee, not pictured, joins the elementary and high school teachers each year in making the faculty meeting before the holidays a time for good food and fellowship.

Reminisce with us as we bring the eventful happenings of the past year to you. In pictures and words we have recorded the classes and the clubs, the athletic events, the varsity queen—the work and the play that we have done together.

In this annual each student in MCHS is commemorated in a small way. We give this record to you with the hope that you will think of this year in high school as a milestone in your life.

Sybil Sims (Janet Thomas) an interfering neighbor, has just come upon Ingrid Hanson (Wendy Lowe) teaching David Stafford (Jerry Garner) how to Cha-Cha. Sybil is shocked and disgusted to find such goings-on in the Stafford home and intends to tell Mr. Stafford about it.

The rollicking twins Lois (Melva Swinson) and Larry (Truman Kemp) are busy thinking up some mischievous scheme to keep their father from getting married to either Sybil or Theodocia.
Aunt Allie (Cynthia Davis) and Theodocia (Jo Ann Parson) are recovering from an experiment in the "science of silence" with the help of Larry and Lois.

Two members of the technical staff, Barbara Harrell and Bettie Bedsworth, add the finishing touches to Janet Thomas, while Mary Lou Whitley gives a few suggestions. In the background the other five staff members, David Ebbighausen, Walter Morris, Wanda Barnes, Bummy Brinson, and John Morton, look on as time for the curtain to rise nears.

Superior athlete, Jenny Lou Smithwick, was one of fourteen girls from Eastern North Carolina selected to participate in an annual East-West All-Star game in March, 1959. Selections are made on the basis of skill, personality, and versatility in general school functions. She proved her worth as a team member as she helped to lead a losing Eastern team to a thrilling last-minute victory by scoring the final two points to bring her total to nineteen points for the contest. The All-County and All-Coastal Plain Conference honor teams also listed Jenny Lou as unanimous choice.

Skill in athletics is the basis for James Cathrie's award of a $6000 scholarship to Duke University, the maximum legal gift, as determined by the Atlantic Coast Conference. James lettered in baseball, basketball, and football. Playing the position of halfback, he was selected to be a member of the All-Seashore Conference in his Sophomore and Junior years, and was appointed to the All-Coastal Plains Conference during his Senior year. In his Junior year James won nomination as halfback on the News and Observer All-Eastern Team. Scoring 151 points in his Junior year, he led the Eagles to the state championship in 1957. In his three years of playing football, he has scored 300 points. Other colleges, among them Davidson and East Carolina College, offered him scholarships.

Ann Herbert won second place in the district High School Oratorical Contest held in Jacksonville, North Carolina. As first place winner in Morehead City, she received a $25 savings bond, given by the American Legion.

Walter Kittrell was judged the best school bus driver in Carteret County as a result of his performance in the bus drivers' rodeo. His award was a $25 savings bond. He represented Carteret County at New Bern in a district contest, where he competed with fourteen other boys and placed third.

Three MCHS students received recognition for literary ability. "Out of the Mouths of Babes" by Bunny Brinson and "His Kind" by Joyce Styron were winning manuscripts in the 1959 writing competition sponsored by the North Carolina English Teachers Association. These were two of the thirty-eight compositions which appeared in the April, 1959, Student Issue. Natalie Killmow's essay on "Vision and Highway Safety" won first place in the Eastern District, which comprises eleven counties. The contest was sponsored by the Safety Division of the North Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles and the North Carolina Optometric Society. Natalie received $10 cash for winning in Morehead City and a $50 savings bond as winner in the district.
To These!

We seek to honor these students whose achievements signalize Morehead City High School. They have excelled in science, athletics, composition, oratory, health, safe driving, or have won scholarships because of their academic ability and leadership.

Ashley Jarman received the National Defense Education Act Loan of $500 and the State Teachers Scholarship Loan of $350, which he has chosen to use at East Carolina College. These loans are renewable if good grades are maintained, and are not to be repaid if the recipient chooses after graduation. John Morton (not pictured) qualified as a principal candidate for enrollment in the United States Merchant Marine Academy.

In science three students won awards. Clarence Styrud stands by his Science Fair exhibit, which won first place on the local level and top place in the district contest at Greenville. He was one of nine North Carolina students chosen to present papers at the Junior Science Symposium of 1959 in the Research Triangle. From the North Carolina Talent Search he received honorable mention. He has also been admitted as a junior member of the North Carolina Academy of Science. In addition to his outstanding accomplishments in science, Clarence has been awarded the John H. Harrison special scholarship of $1200 to Davidson and was offered a $650 scholarship grant to Duke.

Jerry Bowers won honorable mention for his exhibit on voice relay at the Science Fair on the district level. Johnny Crowe was one of forty North Carolina students awarded scholarships to attend the Advanced Secondary Science Institute, sponsored by the National Science Foundation, Washington, D.C.

Doris Phillips reigned as 4-H Queen of Carteret County from May, 1958, to May, 1959. Her selection was based on records of what she did to improve and maintain her health, safety, and personal cleanliness. As Queen she represented Carteret

Charles Lynch, as a reward for reaching finals for the Angier B. Duke Memorial Prizes, was awarded a $650 scholarship to Duke University, renewable each year if high grades are maintained. Rutgers offered Charles an $800 scholarship, and the Air Force Academy selected him as an alternate. Walter Morris reached the finals.

The Elements of Our Story

Then said the Students, Let us speak to you of School.

Fellowship

School is an opportunity for fellowship unlimited,
A place where, lighthearted and acting our age, we learn from one another.
"Education is life."
Research

School is a place where we ponder the thoughts of others,
We search out and assimilate,
But we exercise our right to think,
To color with our own interpretation.
We accept the wisdom of the prophet;
"No man can reveal to you ought but that which already lies half asleep in the dawning of your knowledge."
Exertion

School presupposes work —
"When you work you are a flute through whose heart the whispering turns to music. Which of you would be a reed, dumb and silent, when all else sings together in unison?"
But if work is an affliction,
"Have respect unto the recompense of the reward."
Approaching the end of school - and summer

School comes to an end.
A reckoning of our accomplishments is inescapable.
We contemplate our failures and successes,
But whether we have lost or won,
We can face summer without regret
If we have honestly tried,
For sincere effort is the greatest achievement of all.
MARSHALS

Graduation 1959

Throng of proud parents and faculty stand in respect... strains of "Pomp and Circumstance"... the class of '59 appears. Well-known faces reflect an air of serenity... radiate an eagerness to meet all challenges. Four years ago we entered high school as eager freshmen, full of anticipation. Now our high school days, filled with wonderful memories, have run swiftly by and all too soon we part. As June draws near, an air of nostalgia surrounds us all. Graduation time is here again. Poised in our white gowns upon the threshold of tomorrow, we turn and take one quick backward glance, and our past years crystallize. We must move on, however, on through the gates that we entered to learn, and will leave to serve... our community, our nation, and our God.

The Class of '59

The last practice before graduation finds the Seniors full of anxiety and anticipation as the time for their final departure draws nearer.

Solemn faces and tear-filled eyes dominate the scene as graduating Seniors of Morehead City High School leave the auditorium on the night of June 1. This is an ending — yet a greater beginning for seventy-three strong, potential Americans.

Within the memory of Morehead City residents the seven jetties, until recently exposed by erosion, lay buried in the sand they were built to accumulate. Recent hurricanes and the deepening of the channel have caused them to come to light again. Distinguished landmarks they are, having been planned and installed by Captain (later General) Robert E. Lee, Army Engineer, when he was stationed at Fort Macon in 1842.
